TUI: Cyprus is a country suitable for holidays

TUI places Cyprus high up in its programme and the head of the company includes it in the six countries that may begin accepting tourists due to its progress.

TUI does not abandon the prospect of holidays in Europe this summer, since, according to a statement made by its Managing Director Fritz Jousen, the EU and its member-states will have to develop a time schedule for travelling within Europe, thus constituting holidays in 2020 feasible. According to Mr. Jousen, these countries may be Cyprus, Greece, Portugal, the Balearic Islands, Austria and Bulgaria, since they are included in the countries that have made good progress and have developed campaigns for the return of travellers. He stated that domestic holidays should not be the only choice for Europe and Europeans and added that despite restrictions because of the pandemic, travelling and holidaying in Germany and Europe are of utter importance to people. The traffic on the company's internet pages, he said, has reached 90% compared to last year, although travelling is currently not allowed. As Mr. Jousen noted, reservations for 2021 are at a satisfactory level.
